

Patient and Family Council

Improving Access to Genetic Services

Who We Are

The Midwest Genetics Network (MGN) invites individuals with genetic conditions, their parents, and other family members to be involved in the project as key stakeholders.

What We Do

The council provides an opportunity to connect with other patients, parents, and family members. Participants share their experience and provide input on the work done within the network.

Why We Are Here

Patients, parents and family members bring an important and unique perspective. They are valued for the knowledge and experience they bring to the project.

Having input from a variety of individuals with genetic conditions, and their families, is crucial to ensuring that the Midwest Genetics Network meets their goal of increasing access to genetic services in a way that is meaningful and impactful.
